CROWNING KING THOMAS.

SEWELL'S TEMPTATION AND MAC-PHERSON'S OPPORTUNITY. Coming Men of Jersey as the Dram-atist of the Future Sees Them. BCENE - A room (No. 20) in Peter's Palace, Trenton. (Sevell, Jarrard, and McPherson seated at a table.)

ton. (Sewell, Jarrard, and McPherson seated at a table.)

McPrarson-I tell thee, Sewell, that it must be done! In my old readings, when the map of life Lay all before me like some ample plain—
Before the abstroirs of old Communipaw And questions deep, of Texas cattle, freights, Railroad or steamboat, had possessed my brain—
What most did warm the cockies of my heart, And touch my siry fancy, was to read.
Thro' eyes suffused with pearly drops of joy,
The gorgeous crowning of earth's early kings.
Oh, what delight to stand with Charleinsgne,
To touch the crown of Rome's imperial men,
Or test the hert of Hapsburg's iron cap:
Had I but lived when Pliate washed his lands,
Companion to the one who, wand'ring, waits,
With him two thousand years I would have walked,
If but to view earth's royal scenes. So, now.
For life is brief and we're not wandering Jews,
And this republic car't hast long let us
Seize sweet Occasion by the tender heel,
Anticipate these stollid dersey folks,
Make fom, in fact and deed, in name and power,
Jast what the shining Svs still calls him, King!
An we do not, we all are lost.

Exwell—
JARRAED—Nay, fill our goblets first. Camben, go on;
I love the trusty Sewell's voice.

Twere well,
Emoothly and quiet done. Will he accept?
McPiterson—
McPiterson—
McPiterson—
McPiterson—
Who?
McPiterson—
Who?
McPiterson—
Who?
McPiterson—
Who?

McPhesson—
Who?
The smooth, persusive Cuyler. Him we sent,
And bade him use all oily blandishments;
And bade him use all oily blandishments;
From the a king; his issue after, kings
From Walikili mountain to Cape May.
The Hudson to the Delaware.
SEWELL—
What answer brought the golden Cuyler?
McPhesson—
At Erst purpose. What answer brought the golden Cuyler?
MCPIERSON—
An first refused, disdained; pulled out a map
And showed how hittle Jersey was: a patch,
No bigger than his foot, beside the sea;
"While here," said he, "behold these railroad lines,
Binding Atlantic to the western main
And chaining mount to mountain. These,
All these, are mine. State lines are nothing. States,
fin the vast stretch of power my fancy takes,
Will soon be swept away. The booby, Grant,
tie dreams to wear the purple in four years,
And so he will, but in his coffin. Grant!
Why, e'en the boy who blacks his boots is mine,
And does my bidding!"
SEWELL—
Well, what said he then?
MCPIERSON—
MCPIERSON—

And does my budding!"

SEWELL—

MCPHERSON—
We sent him next our faithful Uncle Ben.
Convoyed by little Tommy Dodd, he went;
Between the two, 'twas but an hour's short work,
And Tommy Dodd came back triumphant.
JEREAD—
Tommy Dodd and Benny, drink.
McPHERSON—
So, now,
The last preliminaries are arranged—
The purple rube by heyden fingers served—
The purple rube by heyden fingers served—
The men in House and Senate who are true,
Last but not lesst, the crown itself and chief,
The men in House and senate who are true,
Sawall, trising excitedly!—
Sawall trusing excitedly!—
Sawall trusing excitedly:
Cast round with topas, sapphire, and such things
As my ancestral Sewells wore at home
When Kings of freland?
McPHERSON—
McPHE

When Kings of Ireland?

McPursson—
But better. Cousin Jarrard, had we best?

McMinks he can be trusted?

JARRAND—
Trost out the newest seal of sovereignty
And let our eyes be blistered at the sight.

Sewell is safe; we'll make him Count.

[McPherson rises, double locks the door, pushes the bed against it, closes the transom more securely, turns the gas down low, goes to what has the appearance of an army chest, and brings out the crown. The three crowd around it, placed on the table. Sewell takes it up and he appearent jest tries it on. McP., taking it from him, speaks:]

McPursson—

McPursson—

in apparent jest tries it on. McP., taking it from him, speaks:]

McPurrsea.

But one dear head can fill this shining you.

But one dear head can fill this shining you.

But one errong brain flash like its burning gens!

For you and me, commend the pastebard kind.

And, know you now that two nights hence and here,

Within the safe seclesion of these walls.

Our purpose holds to crown him King, Tom Scott.

Cuyler will come, and Uncle then be here.

And Tommy Bodd, court jester.

Stockton?

Jarnard—

No!

McPurrsea.

He's too much Jersey yet for that. We thought,

Cuyler and I, to whet the blade of pride.

To stor ambitions devil in his heart.

With hope of being Jersey's vineroy.

Not yet, the sois of men, by sand and see.

Whe fought that States might all be free;

That not alone night kingenp stand afar,

Divided from us by a winter waste.

But that not even king-making men.

The punier Warwicks of a nobler time.

Might bear their sellah sway through others.

McPiferson—

Next Parker's temper we essayed. Too plain,

Might bear their sellas away through others."

J. R.R. R.D.

M. Pifferson.

Next Parker's temper we essayed. Too plain,
Too blunt, the Brutus kind, not Cassar's, he
Repelled the oily shaits by Guyer aim-a

And sent him recing with his high distain.

Sawatt. Why not appeal to Greenbacks?

McPhierson.

Sawatt. Why not appeal to Greenbacks?

McPhierson.

Swett. Why not appeal to free his wed did.

Similar toom enough within for Scott and us—
To this retreat he did advise that we,
Making no longer stay, at once repair,
And, when once in, that we proceed to draw
The hole in after us!

Sawatt, this is a sample lath simple has creed:

Fre heard, but two things challenge his belief,
God and the proje. This i think to be

Greater than Governor, higher far than Ring:

I to commend this Joe!

McPhierson.—Will well!

Enough!

I do commend this Joe! And I condemn.

JARRAND— And I condemn.

McPherson—Well, well! Enough!

Dou'rt safest here, with both the lide shut down.

SEWELL—When purpose you to draw it thence?

McPherson— Let's see:

Let's see:

SEWELL-When purpose you to draw it thence?

McPinkhonOR Sinday night will special trains arrive.

Bearing the royal men who swear by Scott.

Cyter will make the speech. When Scott drelines,
Cuyler will bolder process not twice but thrace.)

Cuyler will bolder process not twice but thrace.)

Cuyler will bolder process not twice but thrace.

Mill press his bold advantage till Scott wield,
And, yielding, give a hand to each to kiss:
Whereat we all will slied great tears of joy,
And, falling down rejoicing round his feet,
We will not move ontil he bid us rise.

Each with a title new.

Seweil
McPinesonOf Cape May, Beesley Begum is Hopkins.
Sam, Duke of Gloucester: next in state, behold
Edsail, first Farl of Essex, rising see
Our bandsome cousin, Jarrard, newly hight
Marguis of Middlessex, with power to say
"Off with his head" to Fisher. Sheppard, next,
As Count de Camberland will walk crust,

Of Salem, Newkirk will the High Triest be;
Moore, arak Lord frivy Scal.

Alley-The wizard's prophecy may yet be true:

Thy carriage lear a coronet, thy brow

Lord Hardy and the grown of pearls!

MCPiterson's Alas!

For me, I am out simple Privy Purse,
Act of the Green and thou, and the cord of the Stole. MOPHERSON—
More trained and the state of pearls!

More trained and the state of the state of the Stole.

For me, I am out simple Privy Purse.
Lord of the Grooms, and first from of the Stole.

But thee, thou look at so like a Turk that he

Will but thee rise Suitan, and first Turk ee!

JARHARD—

JARRANDSultan is good. I'm something of a Turk
Myself. Sultan is good! Let's drink.
McPirkisonYou drink too much. Jarrard; at least too oft:
Indiame not thus your appetite. Be drowned,
JARRANDMy appetite, in Bourhon sours to night.
And damned be he who swears that I'm not right!
Siw KLL-What' swearing, Jarrard, man! for shame.
You're worse

You're worse
Than that oid Quaker, Barclay Haines?
McPherson, all this tormous time you keep
Me and the rest, untempered at his feet.
This uncrowned King, whiles len and Theodore,
Each with his lips close gived to one dear hand,
Prevent the King from putting on the crown.
Whose office, that?
McPurkson—
Oh shame, I should forget!
Xincw that the weight of our new dignities
And Jarrad's many interruptions, quite
From out my mind expelled the crowner, Dodd.
Szwell.—What Dodd? Not Anizi, surely. No!
McPurkson—
McPurkson—
He served our purpose and we let him go.
Peaceful the dreams that he will shortly know
When he has ceased to be Vice-Chalucellor.
JARRAD—Anien! to that I'll say amen six times.
The crowner? Tellhim, Privy Purke.
MCPURKSON—
McPURKSON—
Not Toumy Dodd?
McPURKSON—
Aye, Tommy Dodd! the first to crown a King

And blew it weeks before.

SEWELL—

Not Tourny Dodd?

MCPHERSON—

Aye, Tourny Dodd! the first to crown a King
Since Billy Bowlegs died in exile. He

Will place the sovereign band which thou hast seen
Upon the brow of Jersey's rightin King.—
If sobs and tears and Bourhoo don't prevent,
We'll all exclaim, with one unfaitering voice:

"Long live the King! Long live King Tom! Amen!
And long live Theodore and Uncle Ben?"

SEWELL—

Sewkil - See Theodore and Uncie Sen?"
Sewkil - Sewkil - See Well, will this end our revels?

Well, will this end our revels?
McPiperson - For sack-but and psaltery, harp and lute. For sack-but and psaltery, harp and lute. The loud baseoon and all uselihiduous drum, The tintinnabilating jewsherp. Likewise the hurdy gurdy, played by Moore, will blow a flourish, all so soft yet clear, That every body hearing it will gtop his car. And then our cousin, Jarrard, sings this song, Wrought by the Poct of the faritan;
Nice years he wrought it, sitting on a heap of the state of the service of th

OH, THE RARITAN!
Oh, the Baritan, the Baritan!
I envy not the caunibal man
Who loveth not a King!
Sing, Senators sing:

Sing, Senators, sing:
We envy not the cannibal man
Who loveth not the Raritan,
And loveth not a King!

Oh, the Raritan, the Raritan! I ency not the railroad man Who loveth not a King! Sing, Senators, sing: We cavy not the canoibal man Who'd bridge the lovely Raritan, And asketh not the King!

Oh, the Raritan, the Baritan!
I envy not the Senator-man
Who prays not for the King!
Sing, Senators, sing:
Hewrit and Havens, do all you can,
You shall not bridge the Haritan,
Unbidden by our King! (Jarrard stops.)
—And is this all? SEWELL—And is this all?

McPherson—
No. One more verse remains,
McPherson—
No. One more verse remains,
Jarrard will sing it, in a different strain—
A greenback chorus his accompaniment,
Mayhap the Camden minstrel may essay,
Touching a tenderer measure on his lute,
And if he do, he'll sing a song like this:

THOMAS, MY KING!

1. Tears, ide tears! I cannot tell you why
Those idle tears should so suffuse my eye!
Tears from the depth of some divine depair,

As when I first began to lose my hair, Thomas, my King

2. Tears, idle tears, I don't know why you fall!
In fact, there seems to be no cause at all.
The Camden waterworks were not so free
As run these bring drops of mine for thee,
Thomas, my King!

8. Tear, idle tears! In sadness do I sing: I would not sing for any but my King! Nor e'en for thee, unless I surely knew Thou'dst pay well for all I sing and do, Tuomas, my King!

AN INVISIBLE FIRM.

A SUN reporter has repeatedly visited 182 Fulton street for the purpose of investigating the commercial standing of the firm of William T. Mason & Co. The only trace of the firm that he has been able to discover, so far, is their sign on the door of an obscure room in the upper part of the building. The suspicious announcement of "No more agents wanted," is also attached to the door. Mr. William T. Mason is a hard man to find: likewisethelether members of the firm. The door is always locked, and repeated loud knocks only echo the emptiness of the room. The other occupants of the building know nothing of the great commercial transactions of the reputed firm. Some say that they occasionally see a man glide up late in the day and reapnear with numerous letters. The general belief is that the business prosecuted by the firm of William T. Mason & Co., 182 Fulton street, is a safe one—for them—all in and nothing out. Their name is not in the directory and the magnates of commerce know them not. AN INVISIBLE FIRM.

Straznicky, the principal librarian, and his assistant, Mr. Corkran, Mr. Corkran is professionattaché of the Imperial Library of France, and tion in Chicago. Driven out, however, by the great fire, he came to New York and obtained a position in the Astor Library. Soon after hentered upon the discharge of his duties som position in the Astor Library. Soon after he entered upon the discharge of his duties some books of rare value were mutilated, and this exasperated the doctor, who did not hesitate to ascribe the outrage to the carelessness or complicity of his subordinate. The latter indignantly denied the foul impeachment and challenged Straznicky to prove the accusation. The truth, however, is that Corkran is not more culpable than any of his predecessors in the same department. Almost from the opening of the institution the practice of stealing and mutilating books has been systematically carried on, and carried to such an extent that Dr. Cogswell had to order the books of reference which were originally kept on the exterior shelves between the scientific and literary departments to be placed in the alcoves. Nor can there be any question that some of that class of men who, being too lazy to work and too proud to beg, occasionally gain entrance even to the alcoves, and to raise the wind not unfrequently abuse the confidence reposed in them. Hardly two years ago a young man of this type decamped with a book under his coat, with which he might have escaped had he not been seen and secured. Yet he was not punished. It is, in fact, not the assistant librarians who should be debited with these delinquencies, but the defective management that has from the beginning prevailed and still prevails in the institution, and for which neither Dr. Straznicky nor his subordinate Corkran is responsible, but the trustees who control the concern.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—President Grant to-day promoted Levi P. Luckey of Illinois to be his private secretary, C. C. Sniffen, assistant private secretary and O. L. Pruden, executive clerk. These promotion are in accordance with the principle of civil service retorm.
